The promptness with which the Rapid Transit bill passed the Legislature is exceedingly gratifying. Both in the Senate and in the Assembly the vote in favor of it was upanimous.

The fact that this is only as it should be need not weaken the sense of gratitude. There have been so many good things lost to us precisely and only because they were not treated as they should be by the Legislature.

If section 22 had been stricken from the bill it would have improved it. But, as the privileges therein contained, are made contingent on the will of the Commissioners, there is little occasion to feel that any great evil has been done by its

at All Hours.

The Statement of a Woman Orator Disproved by a Personal Canvass.

At a recent meeting of one of the New York working girls' societies a member of the shricking sisterhood mounted the platform with cowbide shoes and fiery nostrils and proceeded to inform the credulous little breadwinners that there was not a single respectable hotel in the whole city where a woman would be admitted after dark.

At this startling announcement there was an augible expression of surprise among the devotees of the Misses Dodge, Bryce, Perkins, Creagh and Van Etten, and a general setting of pretty teeth and snapping of bright eyes.

There were thundering tones in the lady's voice and fire crackers in her eloquence, and by the time she reached the midrib of her tirade the hotel people didn't have a but she could not remain. friend in the house. This female Demosthenes didn't know what she was talking about. Women have nent than the botel people, and there is no a vacancy can't be forced, we go out of our public place, not excepting even the churches, where they receive more uniform is ill or troubled then somebody is turned consideration or more honest respect than they do in the respectable hotels of New York.

A woman never knows her real impor tance until she has been a guest in a firstclass hotel and has had the homage that the force, from the head clerk down to the hallboy, so cheerfully accords her.

In the City of New York there are 100 first-class hotels, and there isn't one of this number where a respectable woman would be denied admission, whether she applied at noon or midnight or any intervening money to pay for a room. Hotels are not generally run for fun, al nough the occupation has its humorous sides. Every steamship or steam-car that touches New York is met by the hotel om-Force Bill. It would be a well-deserved nibus regardless of time or weather, and the onor which Democrats the country over arrivals who receive the most attention would approve. Senator Gorman showed from the driver and porter are the women.

These big, burly fellows have special instruction from the manager to look after the young girls and all ladies who are unattended, and when a telegram is received by the clerk securing room and asking for his interest in the wife, sister or daughter on an incoming train, a reliable attendant is detailed to meet her.

To the lone traveller or guest the

As a class there is no money in the patronage of women. Any hotel man will tell you that they are generally harder to please than men, they require infinitely more waiting on, they hire the cheapest rooms, live frugally if the house is run on the European plan and they never appropriate any money to the system of fees.

For all that they are welcomed as guests, reated with marked distinction and given the freedom of the house.

As a matter of interest, the following opinions of women as hotel guests have peen collected.

Mr. Breslin, of the Gilsey House, beame with admiration when asked if he liked to have women folks about the place.

"Like 'em? Well I should say I did. "God bless 'em! We have had Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Folsom bere, Mrs. Harriet Hosmer, Susan B. Anthony and Maria that sort in the house? I guess not. Mitchell, and that's honor enough for any assure you." "Would you refuse a woman admission after dark !" "Any respectable woman who comes to this hotel will be taken care of, and it doesn't make any difference who she is or what the time is."

Could any man pay the sex a sweeter compliment? At the imperial Hotel the head clerk said, with a sigh of remembered sadness, that the women folks owned the place, bossed the bell-boys, bully-ragged the chamber maids, tyrannized over the clerks, and had the house run to suit themselves.

"But we don't mind. We rather like i and take all we can get." On the subject of late arrivals be said We use judgment in the matter. We can tell a traveller the moment she comes to the desk, and a bag, an ulster and the stains of travel will pass a guest any hour of the day or night. "Often ladies living out of town will come n for a night's lodging, to go to a theatre, party or place of amusement. They are invariably attended by a sister, daughter or maid, and the presentation of their card identifies them at once. "Then there are solitary cases that require he greatest consideration and are always more or less annoying because they make us apprehensive. One of the busiest men I know in New York is Col. Parker. General Manager of the Metro politan Telephone and Telegraph Company. He looks after every detail of the immense system under his control, but always finds time to talk to people who have business with sion to the meeting of the great political organization's General Committee. By my side was an old grapheard who shook his head eminously as he said: "It's too big. A General Committee of 3,500! I This will add supposed when the present industrials of the interest and substitute of 1 in the same proportion in which the use of machinery and the division of labor increases, the work around its more and the division of labor increases, the work around its more and so well around the increased appears when the present industrials are the same proportion in which the use of machinery and the division of labor increases, the work around its more and the division of labor increases, the work around the present industrials are the same proportion in which the use of machinery and the division of labor increases, the burden of toll to the work around the division of labor increases, the burden of toll to the work around the work around the division of the work around the division of the work around the division of the work around t can remember when it consisted of but sixty members, and Tammany Hall was then a stronger organization than it is to-day. The only thing that holds such an organization thought for all the street, when half of those together is patronage. When half of those together is patronage. When half of those together is patronage. gentlemen who are fighting for admission find that there isn't enough of that to go around they will be fighting just as eagerly to get out which can reward them with place. That tommittee has grown too bulky."
